

Australia

By the time he leaves Australia, his cheeks are flushed extra pink from drinking the glasses of beer that awaited him at each house, but the cold refreshment was welcome during the deliveries in the heat of their summer.

While he's in France, he refuels by enjoying the biscuits set out for him, happily munching away while the sleigh team does the same on the carrots left for them.

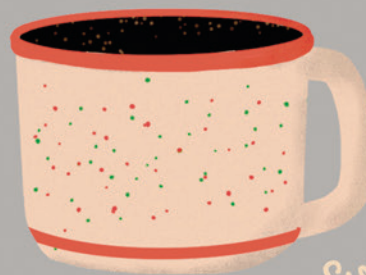

France

Chile

The pan de Pasqua in Chile helps fortify Santa with carbs, the holiday fruitcake settling happily in his tummy beneath his signature red cloak.

In Sweden, he's thankful to receive a boost of caffeine from the hot cups of coffee left out for him.

Sweden

When imbibing on various offerings of wine in Italy, Santa's eyes sparkle a little extra when there's a tangerine left beside the libation.

Italy

In some countries, children leave out food for Santa's soul instead of his stomach; in Germany, he receives heartfelt thank-you notes, which he carefully tucks away to bring home to the North Pole to share with Mrs. Claus.

By the time Santa Claus has finished his deliveries for his busiest night of the year, he's predictably tired, but thanks to the thoughtful treats left out for him, he doesn't feel the need to rush back home to the North Pole for breakfast quite yet. Instead, he directs his sleigh team to run one last lap through the skies, laughing his jolly belly laugh and bellowing out,

Germany

"Merry Christmas to all and to all a good night!"

